Re: Freedom of Information/Privacy Act Request

Dear Mr. Weisberg:

Thank you for your inquiry under the Freedom of Information and Privacy Acts.

Under the Privacy Act, an individual is entitled to access to certain information retrievable by his name, or any identifying symbol assigned to him, contained in a "system of records." However, this Office maintains no "system of records" within the meaning of that Act.

Under the Freedom of Information Act, an individual is entitled to access to certain materials in identifiable records. The only pertinent records maintained by this Office relate to current or recent past Supreme Court litigation in which the federal government has participated. If, at any time within the last 10 years, you have been involved as a party in such litigation, please specify the case name and reporter citation, docket number, or Term of Court, and we will then be able to search our records for any information to which you may be entitled.

Sincerely,

Kenneth S. Geller
